

STRUCTURED TRADE CREDIT & POLITICAL RISK

The Structured Trade Credit and Political Risk Insurance team offers a wide range of insureds a broad spectrum of products to cover a diverse universe of credit and cross border investment risks. Our team of highly experienced underwriters thoroughly analyze every proposed case to formulate highly customized insurance programs that meet the specific coverage needs of individual insureds. Structured Trade Credit and Political Risk insureds typically include manufacturers, contractors and financial institutions with international customers, investments and projects.

Political Risk Insurance coverage is individually customized to protect investments, loans, scheduled remittances, hard assets, contractual guarantees against arbitrary actions by foreign governments, including confiscation, expropriation and nationalization, and other related conditions such as currency inconvertibility and damage to assets due to political violence. Credit risk mitigation products are as customized as Political Risk Insurance products and include short and medium term credit coverage for loans and accounts receivable against non-payment by creditworthy private obligors, banks, government owned companies and government ministries.

COMMONLY COVERED EXPOSURES

- Confiscation, Expropriation, Nationalization and Political Violence
- Arbitration Award Default by Government Entities
- Currency Inconvertibility and Transfer Risk
- Wrongful Calling of Guarantees
- Contract Frustration for Projects
- Non-payment by Government Entities
- Non-payment by Private Counterparties

TARGET MARKET

- Multi-national corporations with cross border investments
A wide range of industries that rely on overseas processing and/or manufacturing capacity are exposed to circumstances that could result in the loss of their subsidiaries as a result of foreign government actions such as outright confiscation, cancellation of valid export licenses and a wide range of other discriminatory actions.
- International commodity companies with large overseas inventory
Trading companies, manufacturers and other operations with large inventory needs are vulnerable to arbitrary government acts and/or civil unrest.

- Financial institutions funding international projects or financial institutions
Banks, investment funds and other financial institutions are vulnerable to sudden changes in foreign credit markets, unexpected government instability and shifting macroeconomic trends that could result in the default of financial obligations by government ministries, government owned enterprises and/or government banks.
- Contractors completing projects in foreign countries
Contractors often need to deploy specialized equipment into foreign jurisdictions in order to complete a project. This equipment is vulnerable to confiscation and/or damage during episodes of political instability or violence.
- Capital equipment manufacturers with international customers
Exporters of capital equipment, including farming, transportation, mining and other high cost industrial hardware are often inclined to accept multi-year terms of payment to privately owned customers. However, repeat customers and unfamiliar financial standards frequently obstruct the ability of exporters to grow relationships without incurring credit exposures beyond their risk tolerance.
